TRACKING NO. 0108-21

AN ACT

RELATING TO LAW AND ORDER AND NAABIK'İYATI' COMMITTEES AND NAVAJO NATION COUNCIL; AMENDING 2 N.N.C. §§ 1973 (A) AND (C), REMOVING THE DOMICILE AND TRIBAL MEMBERSHIP REQUIREMENTS
FOR THE CHIEF PROSECUTOR POSITION

BE IT ENACTED:

SECTION ONE. AUTHORITY

- A. The Law and Order Committee is a standing committee of the Navajo Nation Council.
2 N.N.C. § 600. The Committee has the authority to review and make recommendations to the Navajo Nation Council regarding proposed amendments and enactments to the Navajo Nation Code. 2 N.N.C. § 601(B)(14).
- B. The Law and Order Committee has the enumerated powers to serve as the oversight Committee for the Department of Justice, unless otherwise designated by Navajo
Nation law, and to approve and amend Plans of Operation thereto. 2 N.N.C. § 601(C)(2).
- C. The Naabik'iyati' Committee is a standing committee of the Navajo Nation Council.
2 N.N.C. § 700. A proposed resolution that requires final action by the Navajo Nation Council [must] be assigned to the standing committee(s) having authority over the subject matter at issue and to the Naabik'iyati' Committee. 2 N.N.C. § 164(A)(9).

1 D. The Navajo Nation Council is the governing body of the Navajo Nation, empowered
2 to promulgate policy and enact laws of the Navajo Nation. 2 N.N.C. §§ 102 (A) and 3 164 (A).

5 SECTION TWO. FINDINGS

6 A. The Office of the Prosecutor was created in 1979 by the Navajo Nation Council by 7 Resolution No. ACF-9-79, and codified as 2 N.N.C. §§ 1171 – 1183 and subsequently 8 amended and re-codified as 2 N.N.C. §§ 1971 – 1983.

9 B. Pursuant to 2 N.N.C. § 1973(A), the Office of the Prosecutor shall be headed by a Chief 10 Prosecutor, who shall be a member of the Navajo Nation and have domicile upon the 11 Navajo Reservation, or land under the jurisdiction of the Navajo Nation Courts for a 12 term of six months immediately preceding his or her appointment as Chief Prosecutor.

13 C. The Chief Prosecutor's position has been vacant since 2019. Since this time, the Navajo
14 Nation Department of Justice ("DOJ") has advertised the Chief Prosecutor position
15 without receiving any qualified applicants.

16 D. Prior to 2019, there were ongoing challenges in filling the Chief Prosecutor position.
17 Over time, the Office has had long stretches of time when it has been led by an Acting
18 Chief Prosecutor.

19 E. This reality has prompted the DOJ to reconsider the statutory requirements for the Chief 20 Prosecutor position as set forth in 2 N.N.C. § 1973. Statutory provisions, unlike job
21 vacancy requirements, are difficult to change or update to keep up with the changing 22 needs of departments.

23 F. Statutory requirements created the lack of flexibility and have inhibited DOJ's ability 24 to fill the Chief Prosecutor position.

25 G. The lack of a permanent, full time Chief Prosecutor contributes to internal instability 26 in the Office of the Prosecutor, and has had a negative impact on the ability of the 27 Office to function effectively and meet its vital public safety responsibilities.

28 H. The domicile and tribal membership requirements precede the enactment of the Navajo
29 Preference in Employment Act ("NEPA") at 15 N.N.C. § 601 et. seq., which otherwise 30 requires that a qualified Navajo tribal member is afforded preference in hiring.

- 1 I. Removing the statutory requirements regarding domicile and tribal membership may 2 enlarge the pool of applicants and result in a qualified applicant hired as Chief 3 Prosecutor.
- 4 J. The Chief Legislative Counsel, Navajo Nation Attorney General, and Deputy Attorney
5 General positions have been held by non-Navajos in the past.
- 6 K. It is critical to fill the Chief Prosecutor position with a qualified candidate who has the 7 necessary education, experience, and skills to fulfill the duties, responsibilities, and 8 authority of the Chief Prosecutor, as outlined in 2 N.N.C. § 1974.
- 9 L. Removal of the statutory domicile and tribal membership requirement would expand
10 the pool of potential qualified applicants and better enable the DOJ to fill this critical 11 position.
- 12 M. Internal DOJ memorandum dated June 28, 2021, justifying support for amending the 13 statutory requirements and qualifications for the Chief Prosecutor's position are attached
14 as Exhibits A.

15
16 SECTION THREE. AMENDING TITLE 2, CHAPTER 5, SUBCHAPTER 39

17 A. The Navajo Nation hereby amends the Title 2 as follows:

18
19 NAVAJO NATION CODE
20 TITLE 2. NAVAJO NATION GOVERNMENT
21 CHAPTER 5. EXECUTIVE BRANCH
22 SUBCHAPTER 39. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Subject: Recommending Changes to the Chief Prosecutor Statute and Requesting LOC Support

The Department of Justice (DOJ) has advertised the Chief Prosecutor position since 2019 without any qualified applicants. Prior to 2019, there were ongoing challenges to filling the Chief Prosecutor position and, over time, the office has had long stretches of time where the office has been led by an Acting Chief Prosecutor.

This reality has prompted DOJ to evaluate the statutory requirements for the Chief Prosecutor position outlined in 2 N.N.C. § 1973. Statutory provisions, unlike Job Vacancy Announcement (JVA) requirements, are more difficult to change or update to keep up with the needs of the Department. Statutory requirements and the lack of flexibility with the Chief Prosecutor position have inhibited DOJ's ability to fill the Chief Prosecutor position, which in turn contributes to instability in the Office of the Prosecutor (OTP) and has a direct impact on the ability of OTP to function effectively and meet its vital public safety responsibilities.

To better serve the needs of OTP and to more effectively fill the Chief Prosecutor position, DOJ proposes the following changes to the Chief Prosecutor statute:

§ 1973. Chief Prosecutor

A. The Office of the Prosecutor, as established by this article, shall be headed by a Chief Prosecutor, ~~who shall be a member of the Navajo Nation and have original domicile upon the Navajo Reservation, or land under the jurisdiction of the Navajo Nation Courts for a term of six months immediately preceding his or her appointment as Chief Prosecutor.~~

B. The Chief Prosecutor shall be appointed by the Attorney General and he or she shall serve at his or her pleasure.

~~C. The Chief Prosecutor shall serve until his or her successor is appointed.~~

D. Any attorney/~~prosecutor~~/advocate positions within the Office of the Prosecutor, other than the Chief Prosecutor's position, shall be appointed by the Chief Prosecutor and shall serve at the pleasure of the Chief Prosecutor. All other personnel shall be hired and compensated pursuant to the Navajo Nation Personnel Policies and Procedures.

A narrative of DOJ's recommendations and the rationale follows:

1. Remove the domicile and tribal membership requirements in subsection (A).

Rationale: The domicile and tribal membership requirements severely limit the available pool of applicants. These requirements precede the enactment of the Navajo Preference in Employment Act, 15 N.N.C. § 601 et. seq., which otherwise requires that a qualified Navajo tribal member is afforded preference in hiring.

In the absence of a qualified Navajo tribal member, however, removing the statutory requirements would allow a qualified non-Navajo to be appointed as Chief Prosecutor, if needed. This would be similar to the Chief Legislative Counsel position, for example, which allows for hiring of a non-Navajo in the event that a qualified Navajo candidate cannot be found. See 2 N.N.C. § 963(C) ("A non-Navajo licensed attorney may be hired only if a licensed Navajo attorney cannot be found to fill the position of Chief Legislative Counsel."). Both the Attorney General and Deputy Attorney General positions have also been held by non-Navajos in the past – there is no similar statutory requirement for these positions to be filled by a Navajo tribal member.

It is critical to fill the Chief Prosecutor position with a qualified candidate who has the necessary education, experience, and skills to fulfill the duties, responsibilities, and authority of the Chief Prosecutor as outlined in 2 N.N.C. § 1974. These requirements are set forth in the JVA for the Chief Prosecutor position. Removal of the statutory domicile and tribal membership requirement would expand the pool of potential qualified applicants and better enable DOJ to fill this critical position. DOJ would still strive to fill the position with a qualified Navajo candidate consistent with the NPEA. But in the absence of such applicants, DOJ would have the flexibility to appoint any qualified candidate to stabilize and lead OTP.

Without a permanent Chief Prosecutor, the Office of the Prosecutor lacks overall direction and consistency, staff morale suffers, personnel challenges ensue, and coverage issues arise and burn out is inevitable as the functions are assumed by another prosecuting attorney with a full time case load. All of these issues directly affect the ability of the OTP to perform its essential public safety functions.

2. Remove the requirement in 2 subsection (C) that the Chief Prosecutor shall serve until a successor is appointed.

Rationale: The requirement that a Chief Prosecutor must serve until a successor is appointed is both legally and practically impossible to enforce.

3. Add “Prosecutor” to Subsection (D).

Rationale: Subsection (D) currently only includes “attorney” and “advocate” positions, however OTP has “prosecutor” positions. Adding “prosecutor” to the statutory language clarifies that prosecutors are similarly appointed by and serve at the pleasure of the Chief Prosecutor.

For the reasons explained herein, DOJ respectfully requests support from LOC to address the ongoing challenges in implementing the Chief Prosecutor statute.

Regarding Legislation No. 0108-21: This should be vetoed.

The legislation violates the Navajo Preference in Employment Act. No one should benefit from legislation that violates existing Navajo law.

The legislation completely contradicts the Nation's goal of educated, professional Diné returning to work for Navajo government.

Any and all persons working in the legal field for Navajo government should be immersed in Diné Fundamental Law and in Diné Way of Life.

Re: Opposition to Legislation No. 0108-21 (Act relating to amending the statutory baseline requirements for the Navajo Nation Chief Prosecutor)

To Whom It May Concern:

Please accept my public comment regarding Legislation No. 0108-21. My comment does not represent the views of my employer. I make this comment and express my views as a Navajo Nation enrolled member and as a licensed member of the Navajo Nation Bar Association. I oppose the legislation because there presently exists a quick administrative remedy and the Navajo Nation chief prosecutor position should be filled by an enrolled member who lives on the Navajo Indian reservation.

Navajo law requires that certain important positions be held by a Navajo Nation enrolled member. Sometimes there are domicile requirements attached to those positions too. For example, Navajo law requires that the president, vice president, council delegates, district judges, justices/chief justice, chapter officials, and other elected officials all be enrolled members of the Navajo Nation. Notice that all these positions are positions of the highest authority and are policymakers (in some instances). Yes, included among these important positions is the chief prosecutor position. I am certain that you all – as elected council delegates and enrolled members – can ascertain why Navajo law picks and chooses what positions should be held by enrolled members. The position may require that officeholder be able to speak and understand Diné bizaad. The position may require that the officeholder be accountable to the Diné citizens. The position may require that the officeholder have a shared life experience that is similar to the ordinary Diné citizen so that he or she is better able to relate to the ordinary Diné citizen.

While the chief prosecutor position is in fact an important position within our Navajo Nation government, Navajo law does not require much as far as the statutory qualifications. 2 N.N.C. § 1973 simply requires two things: (1) that the person be a Navajo Nation enrolled member, and (2) that the person have original domicile on the Navajo reservation. Moreover, this same Section also makes the chief prosecutor position an at-will position. This Section empowers the attorney general to appoint a chief prosecutor. Despite the relatively simply statutory qualifications, the chief prosecutor job vacancy announcement (JVA) that is presently advertised on the Department of Personnel Management's webpage requires so much more. In addition to the statutory qualifications, the JVA states that the chief prosecutor must have: (1) a juris doctorate degree; (2) eight years of professional experience in the practice of law with criminal or trial experience; (3) two years of law office supervisory experience; (4) licensed to practice law in either Arizona, New Mexico, or Utah; (5) must be a member in good standing with the Navajo Nation Bar Association; and (6) must have a favorable background investigation.

I will concede that, of those extra JVA requirements, some requirements are necessary. For example, the chief prosecutor (who practices entirely Navajo law and entirely on the Navajo Nation) must be a member of the Navajo Nation Bar Association. Also, the chief prosecutor should have an acceptable background (due to the sensitivity of the work). But, beyond that, I believe the Department of Justice has great leeway to mend the JVA as it sees fit to fill the chief prosecutor position. The Personnel Policies Manual permits the Department of Justice to reclassify the chief prosecutor position (i.e. amend the JVA). This is the administrative remedy I speak of.

Just like the Navajo Nation government has done so since the formal statutory creation of the Office of the Prosecutor, I also highly revere the chief prosecutor position. As a prosecutor, I worked under many previous chief prosecutors and acting chief prosecutors. I acknowledge the importance of the position. I acknowledge the great discretion and power entrusted in the position. Indeed, a number of years ago, the Navajo Nation Council recognized the chief prosecutor to be the "chief law enforcement officer" for the Navajo Nation. The chief prosecutor appoints all Navajo Nation prosecutors (who also all serve in an at-will capacity). The chief prosecutor exercises ultimate authority over who to charge with a criminal charge and with what criminal charge. Title 2 also entrusts the chief prosecutor with authority to represent (and speak for) the Navajo Nation with regard to criminal justice matters. The chief prosecutor also exercises administrative control over charging decisions at a district level. For all these reasons, it is vital that a chief prosecutor relate to the ordinary Diné citizen. Being an enrolled member and a resident will ensure that the chief prosecutor relates to the ordinary Diné citizen.

To my understanding, the Hopi Tribe does not have enrollment and residency requirements for its chief prosecutor. Years ago, the Hopi Tribe hired a non-Indian as its chief prosecutor. The Hopi chief prosecutor was instrumental in imposing non-tribal criminal laws and procedures on the Hopi People. This was done through adoption of the Tribal Law and Order Act enhanced sentencing authority. As a result, the Hopi People are subjected to foreign criminal laws today. This is especially unfortunate in light of Hopi's traditional governance and culture which continues to persevere today. It is my sincere belief that, should the Navajo Nation remove the enrollment and residency requirements for the chief prosecutor position (thereby opening the door for the attorney general to appoint a non-Indian from, say, Washington, D.C.), the Navajo Nation and Diné citizens will fall victim to the same conundrum that happened to the Hopi People.

If the Navajo Nation removes the enrollment and residency requirements for the chief prosecutor position, I sincerely believe that the floodgate will be opened and the district judges will be next. I strongly urge the Navajo Nation Council to choose to continue to uphold our culture, our Diné values, and our method of requiring that some important positions continue to be held by Diné citizens. Please vote "no" to this legislation. Ahéhéé'.

Sincerely,
Tyson Yazzie (Klagetoh Chapter Member)

My name is Calvin F. Lee, I am a chapter president and a former member of the Navajo Nation Bar Association.

My concern and objection to the Legislation 0108-21 is in Removing the membership requirement for the Position of the Chief Prosecutor.

Removing the domicile requirement should be enough to increase candidate poll.

The Chief Prosecutor should be a member of the Navajo Nation and a member of the Navajo Nation Bar Association.

The Chief Prosecutor should be a permanent position and well paid and not subject to political whems.

Yá'át'ééh, Tamera Begay, yinishyé. Áshjìhí nishli, Naalání baschichiin, Kinyaa'áanii da shi cheii, Bilagáana da shi nalí. I am a former Attorney Prosecutor for the Navajo Nation and Legislative and Policy Associate with the Navajo Nation Washington Office (NNWO). I was the supervising attorney at the Crownpoint District overseeing two legal advocates and two legal secretaries. Additionally, I was a Legislative and Policy Associate at NNWO, I primarily worked on public safety, housing, and the Indian Child Welfare Act.

I respectfully submit my comments for and in opposition to Legislation No. 0108-21, which removes the requirement that the Chief Prosecutor be an enrolled member of the Navajo Nation and be domiciled within the Navajo Nation within six months.

First, I think it is an excellent idea to remove the domicile provision as a requirement. Housing is a major problem for the Navajo Nation, especially those with professional degrees that don't qualify for low income housing. I myself, fell victim to this. I could not find suitable housing to remain a prosecutor for the Crownpoint District, so I moved elsewhere. Requiring the Chief Prosecutor to be domiciled on the Navajo Nation six months prior or after they are appointed to the position is an unnecessary challenge. The position primarily works out of Window Rock, AZ, which is an easy commute from Gallup, N.M. Many attorneys for the Navajo Nation live in Gallup, N.M. This is the unfortunate reality of working professionals on the Navajo Nation, and an entirely different issue that needs to be addressed.

Secondly, I oppose removing the requirement that the Chief Prosecutor be an enrolled member of the Navajo Nation. The Chief Prosecutor sets the tone of all the offices he/she oversees, managing and supervising offices primarily filled with other Navajos. Allowing a non-Navajo to make decisions concerning Navajo employees is a recipe for an HR disaster. Additionally, a Navajo who understands the concept of Ké along with the many complex layers of criminal justice on the Navajo Nation will be better equipped to make policy decisions concerning criminal justice.

Third, the requirement that the Chief Prosecutor have 8 years of experience is ridiculous. As a Navajo lawyer, I have met many other qualified Navajo attorneys who would be qualified for that job after 3 years of experience. From a young age I was taught to go get an education and return home to help the community. I did that, and I returned home with a mountain of student debt and I had to live with my parents because there was no available housing. Removing the requirement is sending the message that even I as a Navajo, with considerable experience, am not qualified to be the Chief Prosecutor. What kind of message does that send to the rest of the other qualified Navajo attorneys?

Lastly, the Chief Prosecutor position was filled with an experienced and qualified attorney that the Nez-Lizer administration terminated. This administration has not made public safety a priority, which has clearly resonated based on the lack of applicants. Public safety should always be a priority for the Navajo Nation. My experience as a Prosecutor has shown me that our people are hurting each other at alarming rates. Yet, I don't see any dedication to public safety from an administration that is responsible to put that budgeted money to work from the Honorable Council.

Sincerely, Tamera Begay, tamera.begay@gmail.com

I have worked for and with our Navajo communities, people, and the Navajo Nation government for more than 20 years. In January 2021 I stepped away from my public servant role as Acting Chief Prosecutor. But my life is here, my home is here, my family is here. For better or worse, what the Navajo government does and how it functions matters to me and those I care about.

I respectfully submit this comment in opposition to Legislation No. 0108-21 as written. I urge you to consider its practical ramifications. There are better, more productive, and more protective alternatives to consider.

First, let me say that I wholeheartedly agree with removing the domicile provision. It really doesn't make sense, and most everyone conflates residency with domicile. Our courts (and common sense) tell us that "domicile" is where your umbilical cord is buried, or, more broadly, if you're Navajo and "from" the Navajo Nation, no matter where you live now. But when confused with residency, it requires an applicant to have lived in the Nation for six months. Many Navajos either live outside of the Navajo Nation due to the unavailability of housing, or have moved away and would like to come home to serve the Nation.

But I vehemently oppose the legislation inasmuch as it seeks to make non-Navajos eligible to be Chief Prosecutor. On its face, this legislation reads like it's only about race/ethnicity/identity. Or, perhaps, you believe that it's simply about enlarging the pool of applicants so that the position can be filled. I recommend that you, instead, consider that it's about the full qualifications of your Chief Prosecutor, and to what extent those qualifications should be statutorily mandated.

If you believe that the reason the Chief Prosecutor position remains unfilled is because no domiciled Navajos are qualified or interested in the position, that does not mean the only solution is to remove those two requirements. There are numerous other requirements that could be amended and, perhaps, added to the statute if the Council feels that it is important to do so.

I apologize in advance if any parts of this comment are offensive in tone or words. I've chosen my words carefully but bluntly. These are my comments as a non-Navajo attorney who was invited to the Nation for work and chose to stay and make my life here. These are my comments after 20 years of interaction with the Navajo Nation government and understanding the various ways that it consistently works or fails to work for its people. These are my comments after actually serving as Acting Chief Prosecutor -- the hardest, most important, and most fulfilling role I've ever served in for the Navajo Nation.

For most positions within the Navajo Nation, the qualifications are driven solely by the classification plan and specific minimum, preferred, and other requirements for the position. The classification plan is outdated and doesn't always meet the actual needs of the Navajo Nation government as an employer and provider of public services. The DPM is authorized to change those qualifications upon proper request from a division or program, but doing so is akin to hitting one's head against a wall repeatedly for months or years.

For some positions within the classification plan, some of the position requirements are statutorily codified, meaning that those specific qualifications can only be changed by the Council. This is what you have with the Chief Prosecutor position and with Legislation No. 0108-21.

Title 2 only requires that the Chief Prosecutor be a 6-month domiciliary of the Navajo Nation and an enrolled member of the Navajo Nation. The DPM-driven minimum requirements include additional minimum requirements: that the Chief Prosecutor have a JD, 8 years of professional practice in certain areas, 2 years' experience in managing/supervising a law office, be licensed to practice law in AZ, NM, or UT, and to be a member in good standing with the NNBA.

Taken together, all these requirements are what the Navajo Nation, through the Council and the DPM, has pronounced it requires in a Chief Prosecutor. It is time to reevaluate. It's true that the Chief Prosecutor position is notoriously difficult to fill and retain. I am not at all convinced, however, that the response should be simply to remove the requirement that our Chief Prosecutor be Navajo.

What should the requirements for your Chief Prosecutor be?

The Chief Prosecutor position conveys more authority and policy-making influence than most people -- especially our Nation's "leadership" -- comprehends. Before you consider position requirements, it's important to understand what the Chief Prosecutor actually does.

1. Management/Supervision/Policy Direction of the OTP: The Chief Prosecutor drives prosecutorial policy throughout the districts. The Chief Prosecutor directly supervises the support and legal staff within the OTP. The Chief Prosecutor must have a very healthy dose of program management and supervisory experience or be willing to learn it fire hose style. The Chief Prosecutor is responsible for the productivity, discipline, safety, and well-being of predominantly Navajo support and legal teams throughout all OTP district offices. The Chief Prosecutor is responsible for "hiring & firing" and the internal structuring of the OTP from a human resources perspective.
2. Navajo Systemic Development: The Chief Prosecutor has a great deal of internal influence within the Nation. The Chief Prosecutor is called upon by "leadership" to, among many other things, provide training, and to develop and draft legislation. As a Chief Prosecutor gains trust, she will be called upon for advice and guidance by all three branches of the Navajo Nation government on a wide array of issues of vital importance to the Navajo people.
3. Navajo Nation Mouthpiece: The Chief Prosecutor is frequently the primary liaison between the Navajo Nation and its tribal, municipal, state, and federal law enforcement and prosecuting partners. She coordinates regularly, on behalf of the Navajo Nation, with prosecutors and law enforcement officers in other tribal nations and Pueblos, FBI agents, U.S. Attorneys, and district attorneys.

In short, the Chief Prosecutor has a lot of clout internally and externally.

What are the dangers of a non-Navajo Chief Prosecutor?

Unconscious and unintentional bias is real and destructive. It manifests regardless of race; it's the product of the individual's own experiences and the lenses through which she sees and understands the world. Non-Navajos inherently bring their non-Navajo life experience to the Nation. For a non-Navajo supervisor, it's not always easy to understand the need to accommodate leave for ceremonies, or to refrain from certain behavior that would be acceptable elsewhere, or to adapt non-Navajo management styles to serve Navajo relationships with and between employees.

With perseverance, a non-Navajo can certainly learn the Nation's HR policies and, on some surface level, understand Navajo culture enough to be a good supervisor/manager. But can that truly be said for the substantive aspect of the Chief Prosecutor's position? Maybe. I'd argue that it takes years for a very astute and open-minded non-Navajo to even begin to understand how to truly serve Navajo people and their government.

Internalized racial oppression is also real and destructive. That means that, all too often, Navajos give more weight to a non-Navajo's legal advice or training than they would a Navajo's legal advice or training. Silly? Yes! And I would hope that the Navajo Nation chooses to interrupt that pattern rather than imbed it further. The Chief Prosecutor needs an OTP team who's willing to challenge her, to argue and debate with her, to walk next to her in leadership. In my experience, that is less likely to happen when "the boss" is non-Navajo. Community members need to feel open and comfortable seeking out the assistance of the Chief Prosecutor. In my experience, that is less likely to happen when she is non-Navajo. The entire Navajo Nation needs a Chief Prosecutor who can disagree with "leadership" without being dismissed with comments like: "you wouldn't understand because you're not Navajo." None of that is productive. None of that solves the internal instability that is purportedly one of the reasons for the legislation.

Last -- let's just be honest -- open and blatant racism is real and destructive. Why even expose the Nation to a non-Navajo Chief Prosecutor who perceives our Navajo families and community members as "less than"? And, since this is a two-way street intended to create stability within the OTP, why expose even the most well-meaning non-Navajo Chief Prosecutor to the abuse and mistrust that our Navajo families, community members, and the government "leaders" themselves frequently impose upon non-Navajo employees?

In my opinion, removing the requirement that the Chief Prosecutor be Navajo affirms the internal and external perception that there are no excellent Navajo legal professionals, and/or that the Navajo Nation "needs" non-Navajo influence in its criminal justice system. Likewise, it reaffirms the perception that the Navajo Nation government lacks confidence in itself.

After serving the Navajo Nation for so long, not much scares me. My shoulders are broad and my skin is thick. But the idea that you would even crack the door for a nonresident non-Navajo to serve as permanent Chief Prosecutor really is frightening. Especially that you would be doing so to fill a difficult-to-fill position without first giving serious thought to opening that door for more Navajos to fill the position.

NPEA "protection" and enlarging the pool of applicants:

Yes, opening the position to non-Navajos will most certainly "enlarge the pool of applicants." But the Navajo Preference in Employment Act (NPEA) will only protect the Navajo Nation against a non-Navajo Chief Prosecutor if both a qualified Navajo and a qualified non-Navajo apply at the same time. In that case, the qualified Navajo applicant will be hired over the non-Navajo. The NPEA does not provide anything if what you simply believe is that the Chief Prosecutor should be Navajo.

Instead of enlarging the pool of applicants to include non-Navajos, why not enlarge the pool of Navajo applicants by reviewing some of the other qualifications for the position?

To statute or not to statute?

None of the Chief Prosecutor qualifications need be codified in statute. They can be left to DPM's HR policies completely. As the legislation states, "Statutory provisions, unlike job vacancy requirements, are difficult to change or update to keep up with the changing needs of departments." The legislation is asking you to remove all requirements from the statute and trust that DPM and DOJ/OTP will work together to implement reasonable and appropriate qualifications.

Maybe. As long as you're willing to give up the right to insist that your Chief Prosecutor be Navajo. And as long as you believe that the NPEA will protect against inappropriate hiring of a non-Navajo. As long as you believe that this is the only way to fill the position, and that the interview team will be able to reveal the unconscious and unintentional bias within any candidate before hiring. As long as you believe that every Attorney General will have the fortitude to remove a bad non-Navajo Chief Prosecutor before real damage is done. And as long as you feel good about enlarging the applicant pool before making or directing DPM to make other adjustments to enlarge the applicant pool for Navajos.

Recommendations:

Protect the Nation's criminal justice system and our people by retaining the requirement that our Chief Prosecutor be Navajo. Change some of the other requirements.

- Is it really necessary that the Chief Prosecutor possess a JD and that she have 8 years of law/trial practice experience? Sure, it would be ideal (in case you haven't caught on, the Chief Prosecutor is a difficult position, and that experience helps!). But some of our seasoned Navajo NNBA members don't have a JD and have been practicing law for years within the Nation. Some of our Navajo NNBA members do have a JD, but have -- for whatever reason -- not become licensed in a state bar association. Why not open the door for these Navajo legal professionals to be Chief Prosecutor before simply opening the position up to nonresident non-Navajo state-licensed attorneys?

- Is it necessary that the Chief Prosecutor have at least 2 years' experience "managing and supervising a law office"? Again, it would be ideal. But it's not realistic or even necessary. There are few law offices in the Nation, and therefore few opportunities for a Navajo legal professional to have ever managed a law office while practicing law in the Navajo Nation. There are ways to measure management and supervisory and human resource skills without requiring it to have been in a law office.
- There are lots of permutations and changes that could be made to the qualifications. Be creative and think critically about the best qualifications for our Chief Prosecutor. Remember, the goal is to broaden the applicant pool for those you believe are truly qualified to serve in this capacity within the Navajo Nation.

These recommended changes are absolutely not a "lowering of the bar!" They directly reflect that our legal system's backbone is comprised of Navajo legal advocates licensed within the Navajo Nation Bar Association. Those advocates -- every bit ATTORNEYS in my mind -- fully practice all types of law within the Navajo Nation, but they are denied the opportunity to be Chief Prosecutor. Likewise, there may be Navajo attorneys who want to come home to serve as Chief Prosecutor, but have been denied the opportunity due to what they see as a residency requirement.

In conclusion, the legislation as written is just too "easy." It's all about simply filling a position with an experienced warm body and calling it a day. In my opinion, the legislation misses the mark on protecting the integrity of the Navajo Nation's legal system, and it further embeds the notion that Navajos aren't good enough to serve in the top positions within their own government. I urge you to reevaluate the underlying qualifications for our Chief Prosecutor position and determine whether there are changes to be made that will entice Navajo legal professionals, with or without state licensure, to come home and serve.

If you make the best changes you can to the Chief Prosecutor requirements, and you still can't fill the position permanently -- take heart! If you've worked hard to change the law once, you can change it again -- try new things, add resident non-Navajos to the pool, open the pool up to everyone -- that's your job. Jumping from one end of the spectrum to the other is easy and convenient, but leadership means trying to do the right thing, even if it's difficult and very inconvenient.

COMMENT ON LEGISLATION 0108-21:

Yá'át'ééh shi nataani. Shí éí Gertrude Lee yinishyé. Tó'áhání nishłı́, Tótsohnii bashishchiin, Táchii'nii dashicheii, Kinyaa'áanii dashinalíí. I am from the Four Corner's area of New Mexico. I am an attorney who is licensed in New Mexico and have been licensed to practice law in the Navajo Nation since 2013. My legal career of eleven (11) years has been dedicated to public service as a prosecutor. I had the great honor of serving as Chief Prosecutor of the Navajo Nation from October 31, 2016 to April 22, 2019, when I was informed my appointment as Chief Prosecutor had come to an end. I am writing this public comment to raise concerns regarding legislation 0108-21's removal of the requirement that the Chief Prosecutor be a member of the Navajo Nation.

I do not oppose 0108-21 in its entirety. The provision that requires the Chief Prosecutor to have a domicile upon the Navajo Reservation for a term of six months should be removed, especially in light of the Navajo Nation Supreme Court's analysis in In Re Vern Lee, 9 Nav. R. 61 (Aug. 11, 2006). In that case, the Supreme Court struck down the residency provision in Title 2 and Title 11 of the Navajo Nation Code for candidates running for president. On a more practical side and speaking from experience, recruiting for legal positions is extremely difficult because of lack of housing. Young Navajos are encouraged to leave the reservation, attain professional degrees, and acquire the experience needed to successfully apply for a position. For many people, most of these things can only be done off-reservation. This makes the domicile requirement a hurdle to applicants.

I also do not oppose striking the provision that the Chief Prosecutor serve until his or her successor is appointed. The Chief Prosecutor position is an at-will position. It is a contradiction to state that the Chief Prosecutor serves at the pleasure of the Attorney General yet is required to serve until a successor is appointed. If the Chief Prosecutor is hired under one Attorney General, and after the election cycle the Council appoints a new Attorney General, and the newly appointed Attorney General makes the decision to end the Chief Prosecutor's appointment without a successor ready to step in, there is little to be done. One could say it is to be expected during a transition from one administration to the next. While the decision to end the Chief Prosecutor's appointment without a successor in line may have serious consequences not just for the Office of the Prosecutor but the entire Navajo public safety system, it is the right and privilege of the Attorney General to do so.

My question to the honorable delegates of the Navajo Nation Council is whether the position of the Chief Prosecutor should be an at-will position and whether other protections should be in place to protect the position from becoming vacant. An example of an important legal position within the criminal justice system that is not at-will is the position of the Director of the Office of the Navajo Public Defender. Under 2 N.N.C. § 1994:

C. The Public Defender Commission shall appoint and discharge, for good cause only, the Director of the Office of the Navajo Public Defender. The Director shall be appointed to serve a term of three years and shall serve until his or her successor is appointed and qualified. The Director may be reappointed for one or more subsequent three-year terms. Vacancies in the office shall be filled by the Public Defender Commission for the remainder of the unexpired term.

As the delegates are aware, the Director of the Office of the Public Defender is not included in the Attorney General's budget during budget season. During budget season the Director advocates for her office and budget. She also appears, as requested, before the oversight committee to address concerns and provide input as needed. I think it is time to review whether the Chief Prosecutor position and Office of the Prosecutor should be separated from the Office of the Attorney General, much like the Office of the Navajo Public Defender.

I do oppose removing the requirement that the Chief Prosecutor be a member of the Navajo Nation and ask the Council not to remove it. First, removing the residence and domicile requirement currently present in the Job Vacancy Announcement (JVA) will have an impact on the number of qualified applicants. Second, the unique responsibilities and powers required of a Chief Prosecutor supports keeping the membership requirement in place.

The Chief Prosecutor is not just an administrative figurehead, the Chief Prosecutor has to have the ability to manage ten legal offices with dozens of staff members across the entire Navajo Nation. The day in and day out process of decision making beyond administrative duties involves working with law enforcement (federal, state, and tribal) to ensure the safety of the community by prosecuting every manner of crime from petty theft to major assaults and murder. They also wear the hat of the juvenile presenting officer (JPO) which means they have to make decisions affecting the health and welfare of the Navajo Nation's children. Many people do not realize that the Office of the Prosecutor represents the Navajo Nation in dependency cases (i.e. child abuse and neglect cases) filed in the Navajo Courts. When you are talking about taking away the liberty of a Navajo person by putting them in jail or when you are talking about removing a Navajo child from their parents, who should lead the legal office tasked with those decisions? The Chief Prosecutor leads the Prosecutors and JPOs and sets the tone for the staff. On the Navajo Nation, when a Navajo person is brought before a Navajo judge to answer allegations they violated Navajo law, and may end up in a Navajo jail, the leader of the office prosecuting those charges should be a member of the Navajo Nation. Also, I have no doubt there Navajo people out there who have the experience, qualifications, and integrity to fulfill the role and responsibility of the Chief Prosecutor.

As to recruitment, there is much that can be done separate and apart from amending Title 2 to create a larger pool of applicants for the Chief Prosecutor. First, after taking a look at the current JVA, I am concerned with the delay in advertising. The JVA currently posted and available on the Navajo Nation Department of Personnel Management website was posted on June 12, 2020. See Exhibit 1. Which begs the question, what caused the delay of over a year in advertising the position? The COVID-19 pandemic could only reasonably account for 3 of those months. Such a delay appears to be a major contributing factor to the most recent stretch of time the position has remained vacant. I won't speculate on what caused the delay but addressing that issue is part and parcel of the overall discussion of how best to address changes to Title 2 to ensure the Chief Prosecutor position remains filled.

Second, there are changes that can be made to the qualifications listed in the JVA. The JVA requires a minimum 8 years of professional experience, 2 of which must be management, and a juris doctorate degree. Other special requirements include the person must be Navajo, the domicile requirement, the person must be licensed to practice law in Arizona, New Mexico, or Utah, they must be a member in good standing with the Navajo Nation Bar Association, and they have to have a favorable background investigation. Most of the requirements currently on the JVA can be revisited. A major change that could instantly increase the applicant pool is to open up the Chief Prosecutor position to tribal advocates. Tribal advocates do the same work as attorneys, they hold the same Navajo Nation license to practice law, and they are held to the same standards as attorneys. Additionally, the work of the Office of the Prosecutor rarely, if ever, requires appearing in state or federal court, which greatly decreases the need for a NM/AZ/UT license to practice law.

In conclusion, I strongly encourage the honorable delegates to leave the requirement that the Chief Prosecutor be a member of the Navajo Nation in place.

Ahéhee', thank you for considering my thoughts and concerns.

Respectfully,

Gertrude Lee, Esq.
